The Clairault Semillon Sauvignon Blanc 2006 was a stand out from the kiwi crowd at the 2007 Sydney International Wine Competition. It has won a BLUE GOLD award, acquired a prestigious position in the TOP 100 and also won the Trophy for the “Best Lighter Bodied White Table Wine in the competition”! With New Zealand wines dominating the competition (winning 9 out of 24 awards), Clairault Semillon Sauvignon Blanc 2006 was the only Western Australian white wine to win a TROPHY at this well known and respected competition!

Clairault’s Chief Winemaker, Will Shields commented that “Winning these awards and this trophy just goes to show that Margaret River Semillon Sauvignon Blanc blends stand up against the New Zealand lighter bodied white wines. The cooler 2006 vintage produced a more grassy Semillon and more concentrated pure fruit flavours in the Sauvignon Blanc. It also is a huge reward for all the hard work put in by all the Clairault staff!”

The Sydney International Wine Show was founded in 1982 and is well known and respected amongst the wine industry, sommeliers, restaurateurs’ and especially consumers. The show was designed to find wines that accompany food well. One of the main aims of the competition is to offer consumers independent information to help in their choice of wines. There is little organised food-related information available to the average consumer to help him/her know which wine to choose to complement a given dish. Most wine competitions stop at judging wine quality. Since its inception in 1982, this competition has gone beyond that, seeking out wines of highest quality that go well with food. www.top100wines.com
